He walked up to the door and glanced through the peephole, seeing a woman standing on the other side of the door. It was Maria Juanita, the same woman he always saw when he logged onto her website. John Doe slowly opened the hotel room door as Maria Juanita stood, almost nervously, in the hallway. He was feeling a bit nervous himself.

Maria Juanita had only one thought on her mind... complete seduction. She knew how high the stakes really were. Humanity was either on the brink of evolution... or complete annihilation. Given the situation, would John Doe have her complete cooperation?

John had only one thing on his mind too. It was also evolution... technologically. Destiny hung in the balance. He wasn't exactly sure how he had come to this point and place in time. Perhaps this was part of some sort of domino effect of something much bigger that was all time-encompassing. In other words, had he been here before... or was he going to be here? He was beginning to doubt himself being there at all.

"Please come in."

John Doe stood aside to let Maria Juanita into the hotel room.

"I'm so glad we finally have a chance to meet in person," Maria Juanita said as she walked into the room and placed her handbag on the table next to the laptop that was still live streaming. "This is a nice room. I think I like your taste."

"Would you like me to order room service?"

"Maybe later," Maria Juanita responded. "But speaking of which... it's so unusual that we didn't meet up at like a restaurant or something."

"Reduces the odds of being stood up," replied John Doe as they both laughed nervously.

"I'm so glad that you're willing to help me renovate my website," said Maria Juanita. "And it's much more convenient to discuss this in person."

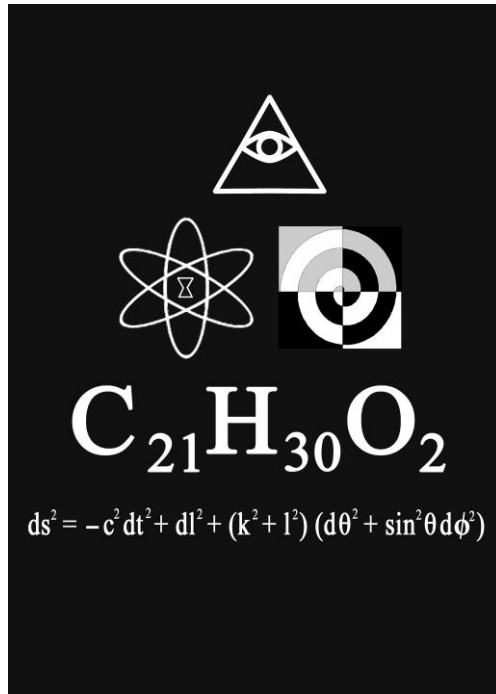

"It's especially important to keep your firewall up to date," stated John Doe.

"Already calling this a date?" replied Maria Juanita.

John Doe gestured towards a chair at the table.

"Uh, have a seat."
